

Prepared for THEO MARCHBANK · generated on 18 April 2026 · reference VS-2604-9152218. This printable version contains the same data as your online report. Data is supplied to Veracity Score by lenders, the electoral roll and public records; it is updated when data providers report, usually monthly.

Your Veracity Score

Your score has risen by 44 points since your last report. The accounts opened after your move in 2025 now show a longer payment history, your electoral-roll registration is confirmed at your current address, and no new adverse information has been recorded.

Understanding Your Score

The factors below have the largest effect on your score this month. Factors marked “helping” are raising your score; those marked “holding back” are lowering it.

Helping	No missed or late payments reported in the last six years on any open account.
Helping	Electoral roll registration confirmed at your present address.
Helping	Low use of available credit — your reported card balances are a small proportion of your combined credit limits.
Holding back	Several accounts on your report were opened recently, which lowers your average account age.
Holding back	A change of address in the last twelve months. Lenders see stability build over time at one address.

Your score is calculated only from the data in this report. It is refreshed each time data providers report, usually monthly, and whenever you request a report. Lenders do not see this score; they see the underlying data and apply their own scoring.

How To Read This Report

Each data item appears in a box with a black index chip (C1, C2... for credit accounts, P1... for searches, R1... for rental data, A1... for linked addresses). Empty sections say so explicitly — an empty section is good news more often than not. Monthly grids read left to right from the most recent month; the balance row shows the balance reported at each month end, and for revolving accounts the payment rows show what was paid against the previous statement. If anything in this report looks wrong, use the “Query this entry” link in your online report or write to Consumer Services at the address in the Useful Addresses section — disputes are answered within 28 days, and disputed entries are marked as disputed while the data supplier investigates.
